The updated images are the same as those prepared and submitted to the GLA in January 2019. The only changes are to the way some of the parts of the building in the images are rendered and how they respond to the light. The building design strategy involved significant design work and proposes a number of different materials and devices which are intended to create a series of distinct elements for example, an attic storey or a pronounced gable protruding beyond the main facade line. In 9 of the views these 'distinct elements' of some of the buildings were not rendered at an appropriate level of detail to allow for a full appreciation of the building design. The updated images more accurately reflect the design, with the individual components now having greater legibility within the total building(s) composition within the views.
