Introduction

With the aim of making the democratic process as transparent as possible to the London electorate, this report includes a great deal of detail on every aspect of the 2010 London Borough council general elections. No other single volume presents the full results and election statistics from the 32 London boroughs enabling the reader to analyse and compare the results across London in one place.

The report presents data for every candidate in every ward (excluding the City of London which operates on a different electoral model). Summaries are provided in the form of maps and tables, and to make comparisons easier, they mostly match those included in the 2006 report with a few useful additions. Results of all council by-elections between the general elections in 2006 and 2010, as well as details of the elections in the three boroughs that directly elect a mayor, are also presented here.

The borough elections of the 6 May 2010 took place on the same day as the parliamentary general election, which was the first time this has ever happened. This led to a marked increase in turnout from around 38 per cent in 2006 to 62 per cent in 2010, which meant over 3.5 million Londoners voted. These additional voters had a clear impact on the spread of successful candidates across the major and minor parties. For example, only 23 candidates from minor parties were elected - the joint lowest ever (equal to 1986), and representing just 1.4 per cent of the candidates who stood for minor parties, comfortably the lowest ever in the borough elections. This shows that the additional million or so electors who voted, were less likely to vote for minor parties.

However, due to the high turnout, all three major parties and the minor parties, when taken as one group, had the highest number of votes ever in absolute terms. Along with the significant increase in voters, more candidates stood for election in 2010 than in any previous borough election at 6,828, which was 437 more than in 2006.

Labour was the only major party to improve its position making a net gain of 191 seats, the party's largest gain since 1971. Labour returned as the party with the most seats in London, a position it had held in eight of the previous twelve general elections, including five consecutive elections between 1986 and 2002, and gave Labour just under half of all seats in London.

The Conservatives lost 68 and the Liberal Democrats lost 71 seats from 2006. The Liberal Democrats had their worst result since 1990 in terms of number of seats won, winning only 16 per cent of the seats they contested, and losing their highest number of seats in any borough election.

Labour made the most of the votes they received, with 65 per cent of their votes for candidates who were subsequently elected, slightly higher than the Conservatives (60 per cent) and significantly higher than Liberal Democrats (27 per cent) and other parties (8 per cent).

Further information about what is included and how to use the report can be found in the Technical Notes section on page xxxv.

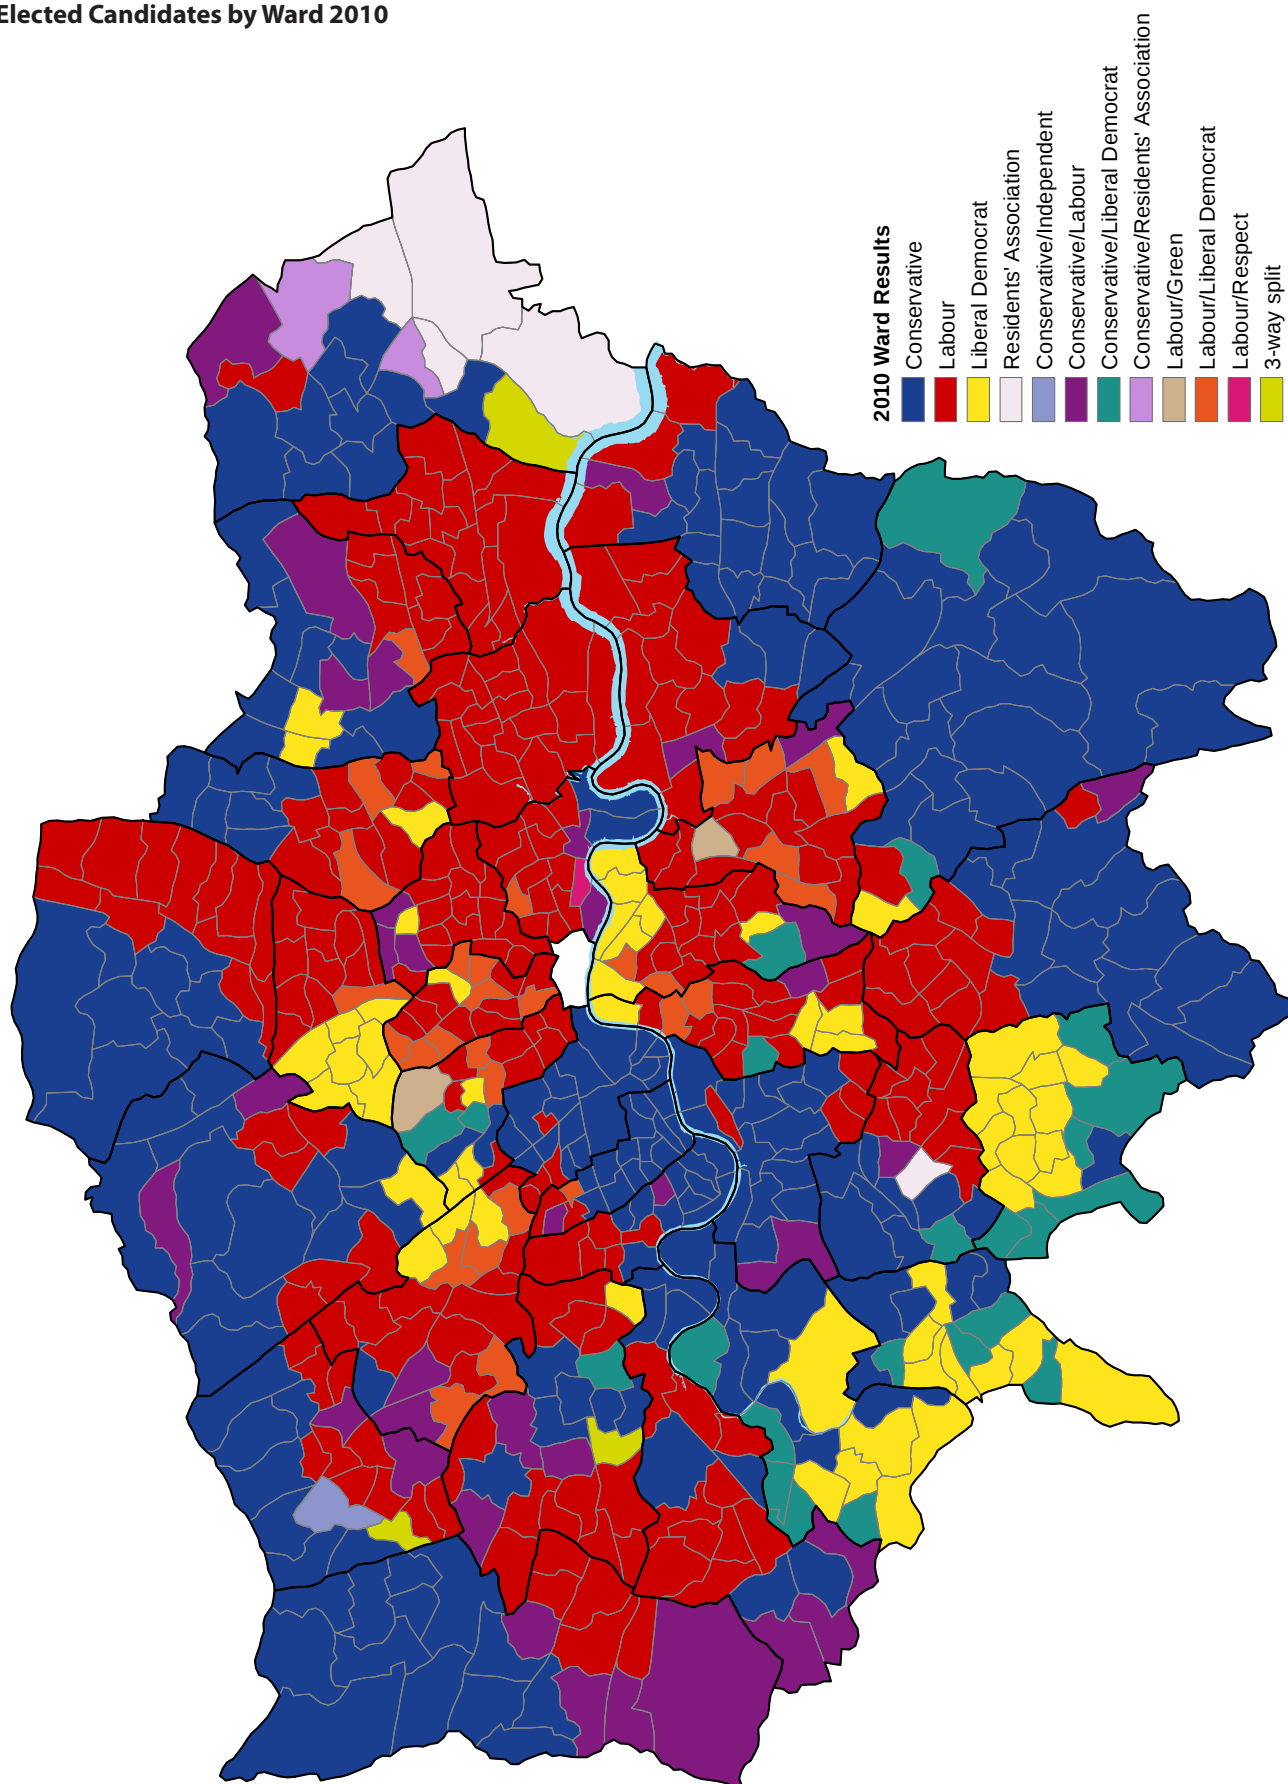

This is the latest report in a long series of council election reports dating back to 1964, all of which are currently available on the London Datastore at: <http://data.london.gov.uk/elections>

Turnout

The turnout of voters across the 32 boroughs as a whole was 62.0 per cent, much higher than any previous London borough general election. This was most likely due to the election taking place on the same day as the parliamentary general elections, which has never previously happened since the formation of the boroughs in 1964. The highest and lowest figures are shown below.

Highest borough	Richmond upon Thames	73.0%
Lowest borough	Kensington and Chelsea	47.6%

Turnout at ward level varied from 36.2 to 78.7 per cent. However, the lowest was Haverstock ward where the election took place around three weeks after election day due to the death of a Liberal Democrat candidate shortly before the election.

The Conservative Party vote

The overall percentage vote for the Conservative Party was 32.0 per cent. This figure was lower than any of the three previous elections and only once, in 1994, has the party had a lower share.

Summary

Probably the most significant factor in the 2010 London borough general elections was that, for the first time, they were held on the same day as a parliamentary general election. This had the immediate effect of raising the turnout at the local elections to over 61 per cent, more than 13 percentage points higher than the previous high point in 1990 (Figure 1). As a result more than 3.5 million people voted in the borough general elections. The number of postal votes included in the count exceeded 500,000 for the first time.

A very clear outcome of the 2010 elections was the very low number of successful candidates from minor parties and independents. In 2006, there were 1,199 candidates from these groups and 75 of them were successful. In 2010 the number of candidates had increased to 1,590, but only 23 were elected. The Greens, Respect, and the British National Party ended with only three seats between them despite all three parties being in double figures in seats after the 2006 elections. The residents' groups alone held their position, retaining 16 seats in Havering and three in Merton. There is a possibility that this was, in part, due to the shared date with the parliamentary elections. The additional million or so electors who voted at the borough elections who might not have done without the parliamentary election, may have been less likely to vote for minor parties or for candidates standing on local issues.

Among the major parties, Labour was the only one to improve its position. The party made a net gain of 191 seats which enabled them to take control in ten boroughs (three from the Conservatives and seven from no overall control) giving them a majority in 17 of the 32 boroughs. The Conservatives made a net loss of 68 seats and lost control in four boroughs (the three to Labour and one to no overall control) but took control of one borough from the Liberal Democrats, leaving them with 11 boroughs. Besides that loss to the Conservatives, the Liberal Democrats retained control in two boroughs.

The borough elections

Tables 1 and 2 may be used to compare the results of the last five London borough general elections. Seats won are shown as rates per 2,000 to enable a valid evaluation given the changes in the number of seats available for election, most recently made in 2002. The actual numbers of seats won may be found in the summary of election facts and figures on page xii.

From these tables it is clear that the three major parties experienced very different results in May 2010. The party making the most gains was Labour. They regained much of the ground they lost between 2002 and 2006 in terms of share of the vote, although there remains a great deal to do before they can return to the levels of share they enjoyed in the 1990s. This enhanced share was reflected in the seats gained and in this respect Labour regained all the lost ground from 2006, becoming once again the party with the largest number of actual seats won (page xii). The Conservative Party, while dropping back to the share of votes they were gaining in the 1990s, retained more than 90 per cent of the gains in seats they had made over the 12 years to 2006. In contrast, the third party, the Liberal Democrats, had their best result in vote share from any of the last five elections, but their worst in terms of seats won.

The minor parties too, suffered a substantial reduction in seats (68 per cent) despite a relatively much smaller fall in their share of the vote (3.6 percentage points which equates to 21 per cent of their share in 2006). The exception was the performance of the various residents' groups who retained the same number of seats as in 2006. All other parties mustered just four seats between them compared with 56 in 2006. The successful parties in 2010 were the Greens with two seats (12 in 2006), Respect with one seat (15 in 2006) and one Independent. Apart from these, the biggest loser was the British National Party which lost all 14 of the seats won in 2006.

Figure 2 illustrates the share of votes enjoyed by the major parties since the second London borough council general election in 1968 – the year of the Conservative landslide. The growth of the Liberal Democrat (and the party's predecessors') vote during the first twenty years can be seen clearly but the party's support has settled at just over 20 per cent in each of the last five elections. As noted earlier, the growth in backing for the minor parties, evident over the last twenty years fell away to some extent in 2010.

Change in political control of the boroughs is shown in Figure 3. The Conservative's position as the majority party in the largest number of London boroughs has been yielded to Labour which now controls 17 boroughs, the sixth time the party has held an absolute majority of boroughs in the 13 general elections since the inception of this pattern of London government – the Conservatives have held an absolute majority three times and have not achieved this position since 1982 following the Liberal Democrats' increasing success and the greater incidence of hung councils. Altogether 20 boroughs remained under the same control in 2010 as four years earlier (three more than in 2006). The most noteworthy changes were in the seven boroughs which came out of 'no overall control', all turning to Labour. Brent, Camden, Hounslow and Lewisham had been Labour administrations in 2002, Islington had been Liberal Democrat, and Southwark and Waltham Forest had been under Labour control in 1998 before going into 'no overall control'. It is now 20 years since last there were as few as two boroughs under 'no overall control'. On this occasion Redbridge returned to 'no overall control' after eight years of Conservative rule, and Merton remained in that state for the second general election in succession (Table 3).

The rate of rejection of ballot papers in 2010 slightly increased over that in 2006 – 0.63 per cent against 0.58 per cent in 2006. Indications are that the incidence of rejection through lack of official mark has been almost eradicated, and that the presentation of unmarked or void ballots remains by far the largest reason for rejection.

Borough by borough summary

The Labour Party took every seat in Barking and Dagenham for the very first time. Thus the surge from the British National Party which brought them 12 seats in 2006 fell away. However, the party achieved second place in 12 wards with 34 candidates covering all 17 wards. Five of those second places were gained in wards where the party failed to field a candidate in 2006. In those wards which the BNP fought in both 2006 and 2010, their raw vote was remarkably similar, suggesting that in 2006 the party may have been successful in bringing out all their support but the additional voters mustered by the parliamentary election in 2010 swung the balance in favour of the Labour Party. Indeed, Labour's success was achieved from their second lowest share of the vote in any borough general election (the lowest being in 2006). This apparent paradox can be explained by the fact that the non-Labour vote was split more evenly than in the past. The BNP vote, although weaker proportionally than in 2006, remained a factor, the Conservative vote also held up, and the Liberal Democrats regained some of the ground they lost in 2006.

In Barnet, the Conservative Party continued to consolidate despite a small drop in their vote share. They took three seats from the Liberal Democrats (two in Mill Hill which had been in Liberal Democrat hands since 1994) but lost one to Labour. The Labour Party regained some of their share of the vote lost in 2006, and the Liberal Democrats held their share despite losing half their seats. The Greens had been relatively successful in 2006 and fielded 51 candidates in 2010 but generally fell behind all three major parties in this election.

The Labour Party in Bexley took back three of the 23 seats it lost to the Conservatives in 2006, but both parties saw reduced shares of the vote despite winning all the seats between them. The Liberal Democrats contested 40 seats in 18 wards and saw an increased share of the vote. The British National Party fielded at least one candidate in every ward (with a full slate of three in two wards) but increased their share of the vote in only one of the four wards which they had contested in 2006. Eleven of the 20 English Democrats candidates fielded across London, contested seats in Bexley.

Brent saw substantial political change in the 2010 election. The Conservatives experienced their worst ever result both in terms of seats and share of the vote. The Liberal Democrats had their best ever result in terms of vote share at borough level, but lost seats because their share did not hold up in several critical wards. Labour took nine seats from the Conservatives and 12 from the Liberal Democrats, but, bucking the trend, lost two to the Liberal Democrats in Dollis Hill. No fewer than 12 of the 21 wards saw changes in political representation and the net result was that the Liberal Democrat – Conservative joint administration elected in 2006 was replaced by Labour with a 17 seat majority. Nevertheless, the situation remains vulnerable to change with seven wards represented by councillors of mixed political persuasions, and in both Kensal Green and Welsh Harp wards, strong Liberal Democrat performances put a reducing Labour vote share under threat.

In Bromley, despite the ruling Conservative Party's share of the vote falling below 50 per cent for the first time in three elections, the party had its best result ever in terms of seats. Labour increased their share of the vote and the Liberal Democrat vote held up, but both parties lost seats to the Conservatives. Apart from Clock House and Cray Valley East where the Conservatives made their three gains from the Liberal Democrats, they were threatened only in Darwin ward, the last remaining single seat ward in London, where the sitting member who had represented the Conservatives in that ward from 1982 until 2010, contested the election as an independent.

Labour returned to control in Camden. The Greens lost one of the seats in Highgate which they had won in 2006 and both Liberal Democrats and Conservatives lost seats. Despite this, the Liberal Democrats recorded their biggest share of the vote and Labour their second lowest in any borough general election in the borough.

In Croydon, Labour regained some of the ground the party had lost to the Conservatives in 2006. The Liberal Democrats too, made some ground with their highest share of the vote since 1986, although this success was not reflected in seats won. The BNP had received substantial support in two wards in 2006, and although the party contested both wards again in 2010, their vote share fell away.

Ealing returned to Labour control after just four years. This was achieved despite the Labour Party's recording only three poorer vote shares in the 13 London borough general elections. The Liberal Democrat Party increased its share of the vote to their second best showing ever, and as a result gained their highest number of seats. The Greens put up 17 candidates but only improved their vote share in one of the wards they contested in both 2006 and 2010.

Labour regained Enfield after eight years. The two members who had been elected in 2006 on the single issue of 'Save Chase Farm' lost their seats to the Conservatives but on this occasion there were no other candidates standing on this issue (nine in 2006). The Liberal Democrats achieved their second best share of the vote ever, but failed to translate that success into seats, and, indeed, failed to achieve second place in any ward.

In Greenwich, Labour consolidated their position as majority party (the party only failed to achieve this in 1968). The Liberal Democrats (including their predecessors) failed to win a seat for the first time since 1978. The British National Party gained one third place but with a much reduced share of the vote in a ward in which the party had come second in 2006.

Hackney is another traditionally Labour borough. The party has failed to obtain a majority twice in the 13 London borough general elections and 2010 saw their best return in seats since 1986. Recent elections have seen a more even spread of votes and it is 16 years since the Labour Party enjoyed an overall majority in share of the votes, but their share increased by more than 5 percentage points over 2006. The Conservative Party had their lowest vote share in any Hackney general election but retained four of the 9 seats they held since the boundary changes in 2002 (but failed to win all seats in any of the three wards involved). In terms of vote share, the Liberal Democrats had their second best result ever in Hackney. But this vote brought them no more than the three seats they had held since 2002, which the party had held in that year with less than half of the vote share they gained in 2010. The Greens fought every ward in the borough (a full slate in ten wards and a single candidate in the remaining nine), increasing their share of the vote in six and achieving second place in three. Hackney is one of the three boroughs to directly elect their mayor, and the Labour mayor was duly elected for a third term (see below).

2010 became the third general election, but the second in succession, in which the Conservative Party won a majority in Hammersmith and Fulham. The party's share of the vote declined a little with that of the Labour and Liberal Democrat Parties increasing. Labour gained two seats from the Conservatives. The Liberal Democrats gained a second place in four wards and were neck and neck with Labour for second place in a fifth.

Haringey remains politically divided along clear geographic boundaries. The West of the borough is wholly Liberal Democrat whilst the East is committed to Labour. The changes from 2006 have all taken place along the boundary between the two areas where the three wards on the boundary were all split with two seats held by the Liberal Democrats and one held by Labour. In 2010, Labour took four seats from the Liberal Democrats in two of those wards, leaving only Harringay still with the 2:1 split in favour of the Liberal Democrats. The Liberal Democrats' share of the vote which had been increasing since 1990 was reversed slightly in 2010 and Labour and the Conservatives both increased their shares. The Greens contested all wards but improved their share in only one case.

The Conservatives return to control in Harrow lasted only one term and Labour returned to power. A noteworthy result came in Headstone North ward where an independent, James A Bond defeated a sitting Conservative member, to follow in the steps of his father, James S S Bond, who represented Pinner ward as an independent ratepayer from 1984 to 1990. Another unusual result comes from Rayners Lane ward where candidates from three different parties were elected, one from each of the major players. Overall, the Conservatives' vote fell by more than seven percentage points and Labour's improved by four. The Liberal Democrats increased their share slightly but the party could do no more than retain the seat they held in 2006.

Havering remains the principal stronghold of residents' association councillors in London. Overall the residents held the same number of seats as in 2006. One of their gains was at the expense of the Liberal Democrat's only member on the Council. South Hornchurch was another of the rare wards which is represented by three councillors, each from a different party. The BNP's sole member was defeated by a Labour candidate in an otherwise Conservative ward. Labour was the only party to make progress in terms of vote share, but even so that share was their second lowest performance after that of 2006.

Both the Conservatives and Labour came out of the 2010 election in Hillingdon with the gain of one seat at the expense of the Liberal Democrats. In the event, Labour made two gains from the Conservatives, offset by one loss to the same party, and both Liberal Democrat losses were to the Conservatives. This election was the second in succession in which the Conservatives had a clear win after 16 years of close results. The BNP fielded four candidates who all attracted votes from more than 10 per cent of the voters. There were also three candidates from the National Front who all recorded the lowest vote in their respective wards.

In 2006, independents and local issue candidates had won eight seats in Hounslow. All these were swept away together with the five seats held by the Liberal Democrats, primarily through a strong showing from Labour. As a result, Labour returned to power in a borough the party has won in 11 of the 13 London borough elections. Both Labour and the Conservatives improved their share of the vote over 2006, but with the exception of 2006, this was Labour's lowest share ever.

Despite losing less than two percentage points of their vote share in Islington, the Liberal Democrats lost eleven of the seats they had held in 2006, and ended a twelve year period in which they had enjoyed at least parity of seats with Labour. Both Labour and the Conservatives increased their share of the vote primarily at the expense of the minor parties and candidates. The Greens in particular lost share in every ward having fielded a full slate of 48 candidates. In Highbury West the party lost their only seat but hung on to second place in share.

For the first time, the Liberal Democrats won seats in Kensington and Chelsea. In fact this was only the second general election in which the Conservatives and Labour had not shared all the available seats (the previous occasion was in 1978 when two local issue candidates were elected in Golborne ward as it was then constituted). In achieving this success, the Liberal Democrats improved their share of the vote in Colville ward by almost 12 percentage points, reflecting in an increase of more than 6 percentage points at borough level. The gain was made at the expense of Labour, who recovered their overall position in seats by regaining two of the seats they had lost to the Conservatives in St Charles ward in 2006.

The Liberal Democrats won a majority of seats in Kingston upon Thames for the fourth time in five elections. The party improved their vote to lead the Conservatives again for only the third time. Labour lost the party's last remaining seats on the council despite improving their share of the vote.

The Greens lost their seat on Lambeth Council and with the Conservatives and Liberal Democrats both losing two seats, Labour had their biggest win for many years (changes in boundaries and numbers of seats make direct comparison difficult but probably one has to go back to 1974 for a bigger win: the party's share of the vote was their largest since 1990). The Greens retained second place in Herne Hill where they lost their seat but polled a substantially lower share of the vote than Labour.

The 2006 election in Lewisham saw the Greens' best result in London, but the six seats they held then were reduced in 2010 to the one in Brockley which they first won in 2002. The Socialist Alternative, which had also won seats in 2002 and 2006, failed to hold onto them in 2010. The beneficiary was the Labour Party, also taking seats off the Conservatives and Liberal Democrats, although the latter party did take one seat back from Labour in Crofton Park. Lewisham is one of the three London boroughs to elect their mayor directly. The Labour mayor was re-elected for his third term (see below).

For the third time, and the second borough general election in succession, voters in Merton returned a hung council. Residents held the ward they have represented since 1990, ignoring boundary changes, with an increased share of the vote. Liberal Democrats won two seats from the Conservatives which gave the party a presence on the council for the third time and the first since losing their seats in 2002. Both Labour and the Liberal Democrats improved their shares of the votes and the Conservatives share fell by more than seven percentage points.

For the third time, Labour won every seat on Newham Council. In contrast to 2006, Respect fielded just 12 candidates rather than a full slate of 60, and lost the three seats they won in 2006, although they did achieve second place in two wards. In contrast the Christian Peoples Alliance put up 59 candidates in 2010 as against only 22 in 2006 but lost their three seats, one of which they had held since 2002. Remarkably, Labour's share of the vote increased by more than 20 percentage points, to give their biggest share since 1974. Newham is one of the three boroughs to elect their mayor directly and the Labour mayor was returned for his third term (see below).

The election in Redbridge resulted in a hung council for the third time. In 1994 and 1998 the borough was run by a minority Labour administration, but on this occasion, mirroring the outcome of the parliamentary general election held on the same day, the council became a Conservative – Liberal Democrat joint administration. In Hainault, the British National Party lost the seat won in 2006. The Liberal Democrats lost a net two seats despite increasing their share of the vote, but Labour, improving their share by almost seven percentage points, gained seven seats to give them a total only bettered in 1994 and 1998.

Following 16 years of Liberal Democrat administration in Richmond upon Thames up to 2002, control of the borough has see-sawed between the Liberal Democrats and Conservatives with the Conservatives taking a majority in the latest election. Labour failed to win a seat for the third borough general election running.

Labour consolidated their position in Southwark, reaching 35 seats for the first time since 1990. The seven seats gained was on the back of a rise of just under two percentage points in their share of the vote. The Conservative Party increased its share of the vote but lost half the seats held in 2006. The Liberal Democrats had their poorest result since 1994, both in terms of seats and vote share, and the Greens lost the seat they had gained four years before.

The Liberal Democrats continued in control in Sutton where they have held power since 1986. In terms of seats, the party regained the position it held in 2002 after a setback at the intervening election. However, this was done with a relatively small share of the vote (1.7 percentage points more than in 2006 but 3.2 points lower than in 2002 and almost ten points lower than the party's highest share in 1994). The Labour Party also increased its share over 2006, but the 2010 result remained below that of 2002 when it last held seats on the council. In St Helier ward, Labour came third behind the Liberal Democrats and Conservatives with both BNP and UKIP candidates gaining support from over 10 per cent of the voters. Labour had held St Helier without a break from 1964 to 2002, including the party's disastrous election of 1968 (through several boundary alterations which included the area being included within one, two and three wards at different times).

Despite contesting 50 of the 51 seats in Tower Hamlets, the Respect Party held on to only one seat. In 2006, the party had gained 12 seats fielding 48 candidates. That one seat retained was in Shadwell ward where they had won all three seats in 2006 and retained one in a subsequent by-election. The Conservatives built on their 2006 result in which they won their first seats in the borough, gaining a fifth of the vote for the first time and gaining an eighth seat on the council. The Liberal Democrats improved their share of the vote marginally but were able to retain only one of the six seats they held in 2006. Labour's share of the vote was their second lowest ever in the borough, but they came out of the election with their highest number of seats for 12 years.

Waltham Forest had returned a hung council in each of the two previous borough general elections, but in 2010 Labour took the council with a 12 seat majority. The party achieved this with a rise of more than six percentage points in the share of the vote. Both the other major parties lost between one and two percentage points in share, but with contrasting results. The Conservatives gained three more seats than in 2006 to become the main opposition party, whereas the Liberal Democrats, with a greater share of the vote than the Conservatives, lost 13 seats to take the party back to its position in 1982. This was a result of the very strong showing from the Conservatives in five of the six wards the party holds – gaining more than 50 per cent of the vote in four wards and close to 50 per cent in a fifth. The Liberal Democrats won one ward and came second, in terms of the vote, in 16 of the 20 wards in the borough.

An election petition in High Street ward led to a recount, held on 30 July 2010, which altered the result of the election. The original count had given the votes for the leading four candidates as: Ali (LAB) 3,322; Coghill (LAB) 3,185; Terry (LAB) 2,932 and Hussain (LD) 2,043. The amended votes were as given on page 178: Ali 2,325; Coghill 2,180; Hussain 2,045; and Terry 1,932.

Labour had their best result, in terms of seats, in Wandsworth since 1994, but their second lowest share of the vote ever. The Liberal Democrats recorded their second highest share of the vote ever but failed to gain a seat. The party's best result came in the Labour-held Graveney ward where their leading candidate came within 500 votes of a seat, but elsewhere they were generally the third party of choice. The seat won by the Liberal-SDP candidate in 1982 remains the only occurrence in the borough of a seat held by anyone other than the Conservatives and Labour.

The Conservative vote in the City of Westminster fell away by more than 14 percentage points to record the party's second lowest ever showing in the borough. However, this was not sufficient to effect any change in the political representation, other than the retaking of a seat lost in a by-election. Both Labour and the Liberal Democrats improved their vote shares but the principal gainers were the Greens who put up 17 candidates as opposed to two in 2006. In 14 wards the Greens were supported by more than 10 per cent of the voters and in three of those wards gained vote shares of around 25 per cent (but each of these three wards were not contested by Labour and one was contested by neither Labour nor the Liberal Democrats).

Directly elected mayors

The elections in 2010 saw the third occasion on which voters in three London boroughs were invited to elect their mayors directly. Voting in these elections is by the supplementary voting (SV) system in which voters may indicate both their first and second choice candidates.

As with the elections for councillors, the poll was significantly increased by the date coinciding with that of the parliamentary general elections, and on this occasion in Lewisham, the poll in the mayoral election exceeded that in the councillor elections – the first time that has happened in London. There is no evidence that voters in the three boroughs are becoming more familiar with this form of multi-stage election. The numbers of spoiled ballot papers were broadly similar to those in the two previous elections. In 2002, 2.9 per cent of first choice votes were rejected in Lewisham and Hackney combined (the figures for Newham were not available). In 2006, the figure was 4.8 per cent, and in 2010, 4.7 per cent, with Newham returning higher numbers of rejections than the other two boroughs. In 2002 and 2006 there were also fairly large numbers of rejected second preference votes where these came into play, but there are no figures on this for the one election which required the use of second preferences in 2010.

In 2006, all three mayoral elections required the use of the second preferences, but as noted above, the procedure was needed only in Lewisham in 2010. Jules Pipe in Hackney, Steve Bullock in Lewisham and Sir Robin Wales in Newham have all won each of the mayoral elections held thus far. All three represent the Labour Party (Table 4). Jules Pipe and Robin Wales received their highest first preference votes in 2010, Robin Wales by some margin, and Steve Bullock came close to matching the 45 per cent he received in 2002. Once again, Steve Bullock received under a third of the second preference votes used but his share of the overall first and second vote total improved over 2006.

London Assembly constituency comparisons

This analysis simulates the results which would have been obtained in a first-past-the-post contest in the GLA Constituencies using results from each set of all-London elections during the last 19 years (Table 7).

Note: Eight parliamentary constituencies cross GLA constituency boundaries. In order to make comparisons between these elections, votes from these eight areas have been split depending on the proportion of population aged 18 and over living in each area, and these are displayed in Table 6.

The London Borough Councils

The London boroughs were constituted under the London Government Act, 1963 and the first elections to the new councils were held on 7 May 1964. Prior to 1976, councillors were elected at general elections held every three years but as a result of an order made under the Local Government Act, 1972, the term of office of members of London borough councils was increased to four years. Before 1978 each council included aldermen, to a maximum of one sixth of the councillors, elected by the councillors from among themselves or from persons qualified to be councillors. Under the Local Government Act, 1972, the office of alderman of a London borough council ceased to exist after the 1978 elections. The mayor of each borough is elected annually by each council from among the councillors, with the following exception: under the Local Government Act, 2000, a council proposing a directly elected mayor must carry out a referendum on its proposals, the result of which is binding on the local authority (see the commentary on directly elected mayors in London on page xxvi).

Following ward boundary changes which became effective on 2 May 2002, the total number of wards in London were reduced from 1,917 to 1,861. The number of wards per borough now varies from 16 in Hammersmith and Fulham, Islington and Kingston upon Thames to 24 in Croydon. The number of councillors per borough ranges from 46 in Hammersmith and Fulham to 70 in Croydon. Most London wards now return 3 members, but four boroughs include wards with fewer seats: Bromley with four two-seat and one single-seat ward, Croydon with two two-seat wards, Hammersmith and Fulham with two two-seat wards too and Hillingdon with one two-seat ward.

City of London

The Corporation of London is constituted differently to the London boroughs and is, therefore, not included in the current publication. It consists of common councilmen and aldermen in addition to the Lord Mayor. The aldermen are elected for life by the ward voters (who include business as well as resident voters).

Where comparisons have been made between the borough election data and other elections, the City of London has been excluded from the Cities of London and Westminster constituency and the North East GLA Assembly constituency. Current ward boundaries fit within the new 2010 parliamentary constituency boundaries.

Tables and calculations

The main results and the share of the votes by party are combined to provide a single section for each London borough giving all the most important information. This appears between pages 1 and 192.

The general method for calculating share of the votes follows that used in 1994. In calculating vote share, residents' associations, independent residents, tenants and residents have been combined into a single grouping which is given the abbreviation REA in the borough statistics.

All percentage vote figures include a correction to reduce the errors due both to parties or groups failing to nominate candidates for all seats in a ward, and to the differing numbers of seats in wards within and between boroughs. The correction chosen is the use of average votes per candidate for any given party or group. Percentages are based on the sum of average votes for a ward or borough, which is thus used as an estimate of the total number of valid votes cast in a single seat election. Percentages do not necessarily add to 100 due to rounding.

Candidates' names

Where known candidates' principal names are shown as their name as per the electoral roll, and otherwise are shown as they appear on the nomination papers.

Acknowledgements

Once again we should like to thank the Returning Officers of the London boroughs who supplied the basic information presented in this volume. Our thanks are also due to the many other members and officers of the London boroughs who were instrumental in improving the quality of our information. Colleagues in the Intelligence Unit at the GLA also provided valuable information and assistance and special thanks is due to Michael Minors, Gareth Baker, Keith Hathaway, and Katy Shaw.

Maps

The maps relating to the 1994 and 1998 elections use the boundary as at 1 April 1996 and there are thus minor discrepancies in the 1994 map for boroughs which had been subject to changes in 1995 and 1996. From 2002, the ward map shows the new wards that came into effect on 2 May 2002.

General statistics

The General statistics shown on the first page of each borough section are sourced as follows. The electorates are taken from the data provided for this series of publications by the Returning Officers. The mid year resident population is from the GLA population projection 2009 round revised (London Plan), provided by GLA Intelligence Unit. The unemployment rates are from the ONS Model-based Estimates of Unemployment (April to March). The average council tax data are from the Communities and Local Government. Additional notes are also provided at the head of individual sections.

Using the results section

The share of the poll data shown in the results section are based on the average number of votes per party per ward. For example, if there are three candidates for one party, the total number of votes for that party would be divided by three, whereas wards with a single candidate would be divided by one. The same principle is used for the borough shares.

Gains are shown at the top of the results for each ward and show changes since the last election in 2006. Gains do not include any changes of allegiance or from by-elections.

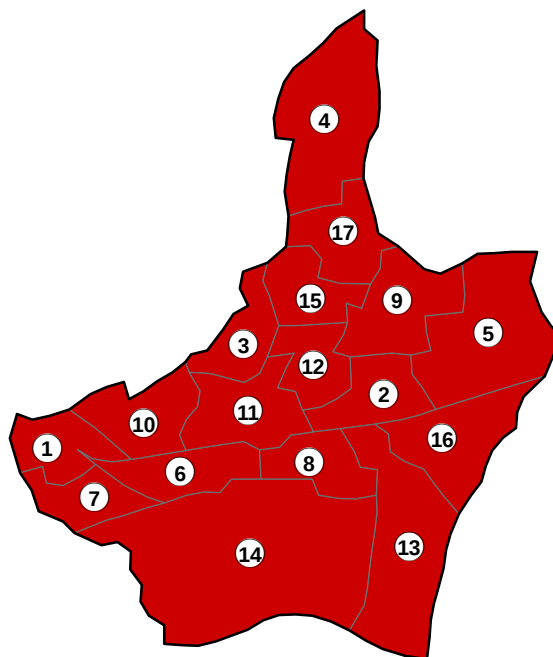

Candidates marked with an asterisk (*) indicates that the candidate was a sitting councillor in that ward ie the incumbent. This takes account of changes that occurred from a by-election. Other points of note: candidates marked in bold were elected, candidates with 'Ms.' after their name indicates a female candidate, and names are shown as surname, then first name, then initials of any middle names. The names displayed are as provided by the borough election officers and, in some cases, are nicknames.

Ward voting statistics

Notes

The number voting is the number of ballot papers from all sources, included in the count.

The polling station and postal ballot papers are those included in the count.

The categories of reason for rejecting ballot papers are:

- lacking the official mark,
- containing more votes than the number of seats being contested,
- the voter could be identified by writing or marks, and
- unmarked or 'wholly void for uncertainty'.
